Location: Highwood

Named for its status as the tallest point between Chicago and Milwaukee, Highwood is a North Shore suburb known for its established downtown district. The suburb's history has long centered around diversity, from the Irish and German immigrants working on the railroad during the 1800s, to the Northern Italian stonemasons and landscapers who sought work on nearby estates by the early 20th century. Generations of immigration formed a vibrant dining scene and a mix of cultures. Dozens of eateries line Waukegan Avenue and Green Bay Road, where patrons fill outdoor dining spaces along the sidewalk or bars to enjoy live music.
